Marjorie Lynch Elected President Of Women's Union

Defeats Next Contender By
76 Votes In Brisk
Elections

PLEDGES HER BEST

Was Active In All Years —
Held Presidency Of
Freshman Class

The women of McGill have shown themselves to be decisively in favour of Marjorie Lynch to fill the position of President of the Women's Union. Gaining the important office by a majority of 76 votes, Marjorie Lynch was swept into power by approximately twice the number of votes which were balloted by the students. Sally Hay received 73 votes.

The voting was brisk during the day and a total of 222 women put their opinions in the form of ballots. Voting took place in Royal Victoria College. With the recent re-organization of the Women's Union, the responsibilities which fall on the President are heavier than ever before.

Voting Fairly Heavy.

The voting was rather heavy considering that there is supposed to be a lethargic condition prevailing over things student. The maximum number of votes came from the third year class, the juniors polling 57 votes. The second in point of votes polled was the sophomore class, giving 51 to the total. The first year class gave 49 votes and the seniors contributed 38. M.S.P.E. gave 12 and but three graduates polled their choices.

Considering the number in the classes, the proportion who voted was about 45%. 40% of the freshman class turned out, the second year doing about just as well. Some 63% of the junior class did their bit and 49% of the senior class cast their votes.

In an interview with the President-elect, Marjorie Lynch said that she planned to try to introduce several innovations, one of which is to have a smoking room for the women in R.V.C.

French-Canadian Arts Discussed

Professor Neilson Outlines
Artistic Achievements

Some seventy unemployed, men and women, formed an audience for Professor G. A. Neilson's lecture on the architecture and arts of French Canada yesterday afternoon in Strathcona Hall. Professor Neilson, a member of the Faculty of Architecture, dealt with the ancient French buildings both from the point of view of the architect and layman. He deplored the fact that the widening of streets in Montreal and Quebec had occasioned the removal of the most interesting old buildings.

"The old houses and churches in Quebec are distinctive and very different from those of the same date in Ontario and the United States," the lecturer pointed out. He went on to show the fallacy of imagining that the old settlers lived in primitive conditions and demonstrated that in the 17th Century, French Canada was already pretty well civilized. Their churches, although built by men more accustomed to designing barns, showed evidence of an artistic skill that developed as time went on. Previous to the decline of French Architecture, which reached its zenith about the middle of the 18th Century and finally collapsed in 1860, the architects designed buildings of a high order.

Avalanche Of Lingerie Proves Embarrassing

Things are getting embarrassing in the Arts Building according to inside information received last night. The old locker room in the basement is becoming a rendezvous for the scoundrels of mad debauchery that, it is alleged, have lately distinguished one of our sister universities. Something is happening around the University. The information follows.

Tearing into the Arts Building at five minutes past nine yesterday morning, a certain student suddenly re-

McGill With 3,792 Comes

Enrollment

A survey of the attendance at Canadian Universities in 1930 showed more than half of all students were in Arts and sciences, or what is usually called "academic courses" as distinguished from vocational courses. This is one of the facts elicited by a statistical survey of all the universities in Canada which has recently been done by the Dominion Government. It has further been revealed that there were 73,515 students in attendance at the universities and colleges; 37,400 were of university grade; 33,081 were full time students. There were 957 men and 283 women who were taking the post-graduate courses, while the remainder were undergraduates.

The largest enrollment listed was that of the University of Montreal which had, at the end of the year a total of 12,309 students, 5,494 of whom being students of university grade, the remainder being pre-matriculation or preparatory students. The yearly cost in fees for each student attending a Canadian University averages $116, though the annual cost of the tuition throughout the year is about $494. The difference between the two sums is borne by the provincial governments or by the endowments which the university has at its disposal.

Final Economists' Meet Scheduled

Elections Feature Last Assembly of Club

The final meeting of the Economics Club has been scheduled for the following Wednesday, March 23, instead of Thursday, as has been the custom during the last year. It will be held at 8:30 p.m. in the smoking Room of the Arts Building. This meeting of the Club will be featured by the election of officers for the coming session and by the reading of two papers, both on the subject "Democracy and Public Finance," by Ken Baker and Sam Goodman.

The official posts to be filled, consist of a President and Vice-President, both of whom will be elected from nominated members who are in their Third Year, and a Secretary and Treasurer, both of whom must be in their Second Year and who fulfill the same qualifications as the senior officials. All of these students must also be taking honour courses in Economics or Political Science.

membered that he had forgotten his locker key. Undismayed by an accident that might have paralyzed an ordinary man, he went up to Bill Gentlemen and with almost unparalleled courage demanded that Bill open his locker. Together they descended to the locker room; Bill inserted his key; the door opened; and on the heads of both of them fell a heap of those kinds of feminine apparel that are usually designated as personal.

That student missed his lecture.

Alexander's Orchestra

Tonight, in the Piazza of the Mount Royal Hotel, the Red and White Revue Cabaret brings to a close the official social activities of the undergraduates for the year. That there will be a large sized, enthusiastic crowd present is certain, for tickets have been selling like hot cakes all week, and the rest will be disposed of today. Any tickets that do remain by the evening will be sold at the door of the theatre, where arrangements for reservations will also be taken care of, as requested.

C. E. Parish, Chairman of the Entertainment Committee, has arranged a novel evening for the merry-makers. Dancing, which starts at 10.30, will continue till three o'clock, and will be almost continuous as Eddie Alexander's orchestra are prepared for a non-stop workout with their instruments. The only break will be a short one, when cabaret features of high class variety will be presented.

Perhaps a Surprise
It is planned to have two of the Revue's best numbers repeated at the Cabaret tonight, and also a couple of the hits from previous shows. The Committee, in this regard, have planned a surprise for the dancers, and if their scheme does come about, they expect it will prove an exceedingly popular one.

The hotel kitchen has co-operated with the Committee in great style tonight, and it will be possible for the dancers to order supper anytime they so desire between midnight and one o'clock. The menu provided by the hotel is an unusually elaborate one, and far superior to the usual sandwich, coffee, and ice-cream diet. Something on the style of an early morning meal.

Statement Issued Regarding Neutron

Professor Chadwick of Cambridge Makes Discovery

The following information was given to the Daily through Dean Eve, Dean of the Faculty of Graduate Studies. The discovery of the neutron has added to the scientist's knowledge and has done much in confirming all the advance data that the scientist has assimilated.

Sufficient information has now reached the Dominion to make it possible to form a fairly clear judgment as to the recent discovery at the Cavendish Laboratory, Cambridge, of the Neutron by Professor J. Chadwick.

The first step in the discovery was made by Bothe who, using alpha particles projected from the radioactive material, polonium, first discovered by Madame Curie, bombarded the light element beryllium and in this way gave rise to some remarkable rays which penetrated several inches of lead. Bothe not unnaturally regarded these as gamma rays, somewhat similar to Rontgen or X-rays.

Chadwick, however, found that, after passing through a considerable thickness of lead, these rays on striking an atom of nitrogen, were able to propel that atom for a considerable distance in air, a feat which the gamma or penetrating ray would be unable to perform. He, therefore, came to the conclusion that, if the conservation of energy and the conservation of momentum are to hold good for atomic entities in the same manner that they certainly hold for large bodies, such as planets and billiard balls, the radiation in question must be in the nature of substance or matter rather than electro-magnetic radiations, and he concluded that he had discovered the Neutron, which has the same mass as the smallest known chemical element, the hydrogen atom, and was destitute of electric charge consisting, in fact, of a blend of a proton and an electron in some form not at present understood.

Other evidences obtained by Chadwick shows that any alternative explanation would present great difficulties. Moreover, in the building up of the nucleus, or interior, of an atom, the neutron has been for some time in speculative demand.

Cercle Francais And Societe To Convene Jointly

PLAYS will form the chief means of entertainment at the next joint meeting of the Societe Francaise and the Cercle Francais, which will take place on Tuesday, March 22 at 8:30 p.m. in the Royal Victoria College.

The class of Arts '34 will present "Les Deux Sœurs", a light comedy by Jules Molnaux, and "Le Commissaire Est Bon Enfant", a satire of police methods. The girls of Arts '35 will offer a few French songs in the form of skits, and dancing will follow.

As admission to the meeting is free, all students in French are cordially invited to attend.

Success In Law Demands Effort

Persistent Work Climaxed

TOPIC HUMOROUS

Chief Justice Greenshields
Discusses Law At Historical Association Meeting

"The Profession of Law is a strenuous, arduous, difficult profession," stated Chief Justice Greenshields, in his address to the McGill Historical Association, last night. "It offers rewards, which are reached by overcoming obstacles and difficulties. It calls for constant and persistent work to reach success."

The Judge thought that the Church, the Medical and the Law professions were the three learned professions. The young Parson meeting his congregation for the first time is certain of two things, he is free from immediate interruption and is listened to in silence. The doctor enters the sickroom with a look of wisdom, probably concealing ignorance, and he is alone with the victim; and he is safe for "Dead men tell no tales," that is if there is no post mortem. But alas, the Lawyer must face the public courtroom, with a legal war horse arrayed against him, skilled in all the tricks of the trade, contradicting and ridiculing in a most disconcerting manner. The witness too is against one and any sympathy is usually on his side.

Humorous Incident

The speaker went on to tell about his first cross examination. The object was a blue-eyed Irishman who answered nothing directly and finally caused the Judge to advance in a threatening manner and say, "You think you are a very clever man, don't you?" "I certainly do," said the man, "and I should like to say the same about you, but I'm sworn to tell the truth." The Judge sat down as gracefully as possible.

Sir Francis Johnson, at one time, Chief Justice of the court, over which the speaker now presides, was paid a tribute by mention of his work and his wonderful judgment. Chief Justice Greenshields told of an experience of the former, when he was visiting a small town and was forced to stay at the Grand Central Hotel, which was "neither grand nor central". In the middle of the night, the guest awaking petrified with cold, stuck his head into the corridor and shrieked, "Fire, fire!" The proprietor rushing out asked "Where is the fire?" "That's what I want to know," retorted Sir Francis.

Speaks At Forum

Is Son Of Well-Known Local
Rabbi

Mr. James Waterman Wise will speak at the Church of the Messiah where the People's Forum is conducted, on Sunday.

The breakdown of the so-called moral order is to-day an indisputable fact. Out of that breakdown arises an urgent need to create a new morality—social, religious, personal. Mr. Wise analyses the cause of our present moral chaos and outlines the conflicting tendencies in modern life out of which a new morality is fast arising.

Mr. Wise attended Harvard and Columbia Universities and spent a year in Cambridge. He studied rabbinics and philosophy; but he withdrew from his study for the rabbinate because of his inability to accept certain of its theological implications. Apart from his books, readers are familiar with his essays, and reviews which have appeared in the Forum, The New York World, The New Palestine, The Christian Century, and other equally well known publications.

Like his distinguished father, Rabbi Stephen S. Wise, Mr. Wise is a gifted orator, and will be remembered as having profoundly moved his audience on his last appearance at the Forum.

Paints Island As Peaceful Utopia

In 1497

A peaceful Utopia in the midst of the hustle and bustle of the modern world was the picture of Prince Edward Island painted by Dr. Cyrus MacMillan of the Department of English in an address over the radio last night. His talk was given over the Provincial hour.

Though of small area, Prince Edward Island boasts one of the oldest histories of all of the Canadian provinces. Originally inhabited by a tribe of the Mic-mac Indians who called it Agebweit it was first discovered by Europeans when Jean Cabot landed there five years after Columbus made his historic crossing of the Atlantic. Later it was sighted by Cartier who described it as "a low-lying land, very beautiful."

The fact that McGill has a well-equipped photographic department in the Medical Building was discovered by a Daily reporter yesterday when being shown around the Medical Building by Dean Martin. Work of all kinds is done here and its services are open to use by students and the various faculties at somewhat lower rates than the work could be done by down town.

It is particularly useful to departments which have photostating work to do or students who want slides made for lectures they are giving. Among the equipment is a photostat, a self-focusing enlarger, and a photo-micrograph for taking pictures of microscopic sections.

Another interesting department of the Medical Building is that in which wax models of skin diseases are made by Miss Fraser. These are very artistic and true to life and reproduce accurately various rashes, birth marks and other skin troubles.

Besides the Talbot Papien award being made on the excellence of the speakers, the procedure which has been followed in all previous Parliament held here will be observed. The audience will play a definite part in the decision.

All interested are invited to attend including those not attending the University. After the main discussion the question under fire will be thrown out to the audience.

Of Annual Show

E. H. C.

Kitty the Ex-chorines predictions have at last turned out to be wrong. Showing such an improvement over the first two performances, that one might have thought that an entirely new show was being put on, the Red and White Revue last night had the audience alternately rolling off their seats with laughter and applauding loudly for the more serious numbers.

John Pratt as the funnyman of the show is the best solo entertainer that the Revue has had for many long years. Instead of trying to be a serious comedian, he plays to the audience and they like it. He's got a new act every night and in his Breaking Music skit he did some uproarious take-offs on the rest of the cast. With the help of Jim Harvey in one of the other numbers, he managed last night to squelch completely a couple of drunks from the Law Faculty who had been doing their worst in trying to kill the show. To list all his appearances would almost fill several columns of this paper but in every one he seems to be funnier than in the preceding.

Gin Rickshaw Again Success.

Gin Rickshaw (for them as are Gilbert and Sullivan fans) ran Pratt a close second last night. This is one of the smoothest running numbers of the show, but though has already been said in previous issues about it. Bob Freeman was particularly good as the Executioner and

Present Cup At Mock Parliament

The last Mock Parliament of the session will be held in the Union Ballroom on Wednesday evening, March 23rd. Several innovations have been introduced into the coming session. The Talbot Papien Cup will be presented to the speaker adjudged to be the best. Those speaking will be Mel Doig, N. Levy, Parsons and A. Marshall. The motion to be under fire will not be announced until a short time before the Parliament starts. In this way it is assured that the debaters will speak impromptu.

Scenes Behind Scenes Reveal Strange Spirits

All the peep-holes occupied, still ten minutes to go, stage hands lolling about, musicians with their instruments, ready for the signal to go into the pit and start the overture. The chorus for the opening number rehearsing their steps — such is the picture of disarray backstage on any night of the Revue. But hark! The strains of "Hail Alma Mater" come through the asbestos curtain; everybody jumps into action; the red curtain comes down, properties for the opening number, few as they may be, are collected and put into place. The chorus waits in readiness in the wings, and crash go the cymbals, up goes the curtain, and the show is on.

A Club Which Should Be Active

VERY few of the general campus clubs refrain from discussing current international political and economic issues. It is quite the thing at the Labour Club, the House of Commons Club, the Historical Clubs, the Economics Club, the undergraduate societies from time to time, and the Student Christian Association. But where is the club whose stock in trade such discussions would be? Where is the League of Nations Club this session?

Some people have been asking recently where the League of Nations itself is. "In Geneva" is not a sufficient answer, the questioners feel. They have the quaint notion that the League was formed to foster world peace and to take positive steps to promote and preserve satisfactory international relations wherever they appear threatened. The same critics have no difficulty in pointing to areas of the globe which at the present time harbour situations which cast reflections at least on the effectiveness of the League if not on the good faith of its members.

It is reasonable to suppose, however, that such critical feeling on the part of informed and uninformed members of the public, far from casting the McGill League of Nations Club into the discard or at least into the shade, should provide it with all the more scope, and consolidate all the more effectively the interest and support which it is able to find in the student body. A year or two ago there was considerable talk of a model assembly, and as is usually the case where travel or other privileges are in the offing, many of the Big Men of the Campus seemed momentarily to be old-standing L. of N. Club members. There would be no necessity to trump up puppet shows of that sort at the present time in getting a following for the club.

Even if the world slip-slaps again into apparent peace and good will before next October, may we not hope that the League of Nations Club will be fittingly back in the picture next session?

Thought And Vocabulary

IF a thought be accurate it must be formulated in words. The truth of this statement may be doubted by some abstruse thinkers who contend that ideas come in pictures and not in words. But to embrace and to fully understand an idea, it must be expressed in words, at least for the ordinary person.

To bring this to the touchstone of truth, it will not be more necessary than to try to entertain a thought that is not expressed, mentally, in words. When a thought occurs, the first thing that happens is that words pass through the mind. It is as though a statement were uttered in silence. A soliloquy is merely these thoughts passing through the mind expressed in audible form.

Somer inner faculty frames the sentence expressing the thought and the thought is perceived as though we were to listen to some other person speaking. When we are in doubt about a certain procedure, there seems to be an internal mental debate, as though we were divided in two, and one part of us assumes one attitude and assimilates the facts for following that procedure, while the other side takes the opposite view, as it were. Finally, having fully debated the question in thoughts that are phrased mentally, and not uttered, the consciousness acting as judge decides what were best to do by a consideration of the arguments brought up.

The point to draw from this is that there must be a relation between our vocabulary and our thought. The words we use ordinarily are used by the brain in phrasing thoughts. Does it not follow, therefore, that the more comprehensive the vocabulary the more tools the brain has with which to work? Having "le mot juste" on one's tongue means having "le mot juste" in one's thought. Hence accuracy of thought is the result.

What corollary to be drawn from this but that he with the comprehensive vocabulary, he with a good handling of the language will have a definite advantage, in thought over the man with the meagre vocabulary? This, however, is by no means the only factor. The activity of the mind must be considered as well.

Here's the original model for the absent-minded professor. Although the room was well filled with students, not a single syllable was uttered in response to his careful pronunciation of a long list of names. At the end of the roll, the professor looked up in confusion and discovered that he had walked into the wrong room. He beat a hasty retreat amid much snickering.

College Comment

QUESTIONNAIRES

Acceptance of questionnaire compilations as indicative of college opinion on everything from red liquor to the ideal co-ed is a common weakness of the public. Any quack, crank, propagandist, or agitator proves his point to the gullible by submitting a questionnaire to a picked group and offering the inevitable results as a definite proof of existing opinion.

The result of questionnaire practices is usually a lurid, modernistic portrait of college life. The citizen at large frequently writes his legislator that he has definite proof that 39 per cent of the state institutions are violent reds. Residents of the Bible belt invoke temporal and celestial aid in suppressing 51 per cent of a student body whom they know to be atheists. The black-clothed Chicago Tribune dry provides W.C.T.U. folder when he reads to his dotting audience the wonderful statement that 99 per cent of us think prohibition successful while only 96 per cent of us drink. Fond mothers and fathers are frequently disturbed when they find that 73 per cent of their daughters in college want a husband who is a combination of Don Juan, Adonis, Neanderthal man, and a pool hall roustabout.

For an example of the validity of questionnaire opinion, the recent acceptance of the answers of 107 students or DePaul university to seven questions relative to prohibition may be cited. Not only were these answers advanced as an expression of the attitude of DePaul's large student body, but they were set forth as representative of opinion at Midwestern institutions. The questions were not direct and fairly phrased. Comparatively few students expressed their opinions. Compilations obviously proved everything prohibitionists wanted, and nothing of actual fact.

The very ease with which questionnaires may be answered is not conducive to accuracy. Fallacious statement bases tend to influence the answers. Irresponsibility for answers does not favor honest returns. Circulation of the questionnaires among a relatively small number of people increases the likelihood of ultimate error.

If we could only regulate questionnaires, their application, and their subjects, some approximation of the truth might be obtained. As it is, everyone should exercise reason when confronted with college attitudes in nice percentages. It's folly of the first order to believe that figures don't lie.

BRAINS VERSUS BEAUTY

Nominations for the position of President of the Alma Mater Society are to be submitted by Monday, February 29. It is always interesting to see the outcome of student elections, for on a small scale they are as rife with prejudice and thoughtlessness as the elections of a national state. The prejudice, be it said, is most often on the part of the voters who find in a popular, confident, smooth-tongued candidate all those superior qualities and characteristics supposed to mark the leader.

The fact that everybody knows him, that he has had some executive experience, that he "knows the ropes," cannot be taken as proof conclusive of his real ability to handle a position of responsibility second to none other on the campus. The President of the Alma Mater Society need not be the man everybody knows. He may find it easier to steer a just and even course if he isn't quite so much the friend of a dozen different factions. On the other hand he must be a man who has some knowledge of a serviceable kind of the inner mechanism of the University, and of student activities in particular. Of course, if a candidate's popularity is really the reward of long and painstaking service in the interests of Varsity, if his experiences are of the kind likely to be of use in his new position, if he is known to have tact as well as discretion, he may with justice be regarded as a likely man for the position.

Nor is it always to be a maxim that the man with a year's experience on Council is invariably the best one for the position of A.M.S. candidate. The justice of this statement will itself preclude any intimation that the Ubyesey is a partisan of any candidate. It is a fact that there are a number of men on the campus who never held places on Council, but who are undeniably well-equipped to compete with the more experienced men. Should some of these consider running for the position it is at least fair to say that their innate ability should in no way be disparaged because their opponents may have been members of Council.

—The Ubyesey.

THEATRE NOTES

From Agent's Advances

"Stamboul, a romantic, modern drama with a picturesque Oriental setting, will be shown at the Imperial Theatre starting Saturday. "Stamboul" has been lavishly produced. One especially gorgeous sequence shows a masked ball at the summer palace. Warwick Ward and Rosita Moreno play the featured roles, supported by Henry Hewitt, Margot Graham, Abraham Soffer, Garry Marsh, Alan Napier and Stella Arbenina. The second picture, "The Cannonball Express" features Tom Moore, Rex Lease, Lucille Brown and Ruth Renick. It is a human interest narrative of railroad life.

PALACE

So enthusiastic has been the reception of Marlene Dietrich in "Shanghai Express" that the Palace theatre is holding it over for a second and final week.

"Shanghai Express" tells the story of a conglomerate set of characters, brought into intimate relation in a casual manner aboard the Express between Pekin and Shanghai. On the train are to be found an English medical officer, a missionary, a revolutionist leader, an opium smuggler, a dishonored French officer, a narrow boarding-house mistress, and two trollops—a yellow and a white. The white is Fraulein Dietrich, more alluring than ever, speaking exquisite English, in a melodious voice. An excellent cast including Anna May Wong, Eugene Pallette and Warner Oland supports Miss Dietrich who never was lovelier, more highly effective.

As a Special added attraction "Hockey, Canada's National Sport" featuring Howie Morenz, the Babe Ruth of Hockey and Charlie Conacher, leading N.H.L. Scorer and climaxed by the Canadiens-Toronto game is shown. Betty Boop and Bimbo in "Crazy Town" and other short subjects complete the programme.

CAPITOL

Spectacle, pageantry, beauty winners, comedy and drama skillfully interwoven into absorbing screen entertainment are found in "She Wanted a Millionaire" co-starring Joan Bennett and Spencer Tracy now at Capitol Theatre. The second feature is Edna Ferber's "The Expert" with Charles "Chic" Sale.

Joan Bennett, who determines to marry a millionaire is delightful. As a small-town boy whose faith remains true while the flattery of the crowd occupies his sweetheart's mind; Spencer Tracy gives an outstanding characterization. His role is further marked in that it offers him many scenes with Una Merkel, whose original brand of humor grows increasingly more popular on the screen. James Kirkwood, Douglas Cosgrove, Dorothy Peterson and Donald Dillaway are in the supporting cast.

The second feature is "The Expert" from Edna Ferber's story with Charles "Chic" Sale. In "The Expert", Sale is the good-intentioned, but meddlesome old man who comes to the city to live with his son and daughter-in-law after a long lifetime in a small town. Strongly opinionated, he does not hesitate to tell everyone what should be done. Dickie Moore, Lois Wilson, Earle Ford and Ralph Harolde head the supporting cast. Short Screen Subjects are also shown.

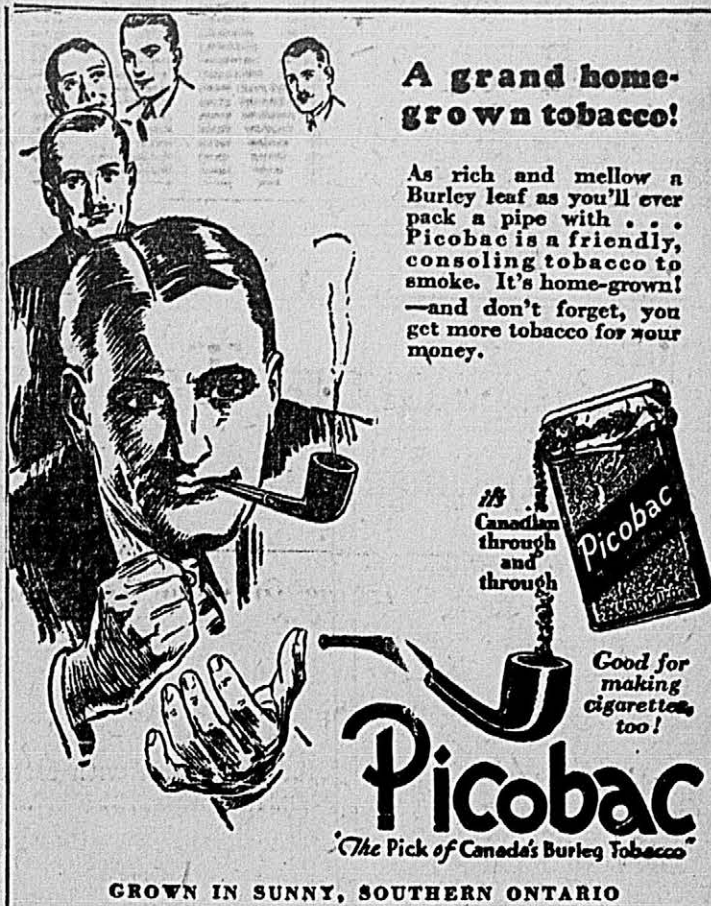

CINEMA DE PARIS

The Cinema de Paris offers us this week, beginning today, an amusing Super-Film picture, "Prisonnier de mon coeur," taken from the spiritual comedy by Marcel Espiau and Paul Godeaux and arranged for the screen by Jean Tarride. The two well known French stars Marie Glory and Roland Toutain lead the interesting cast of artists, such as Dandy, Larques, Andree Lorraine, Andre Berley and Gui Sloux. "Prisonnier de mon Coeur" is one of those recreative films we see with real pleasure. The scenery is well arranged, it is well photographed and the sound is excellent. Jean Tarride prepared his picture with brio, weaving well together striking and comical effects. Good light music emphasises mostly all the different scenes.

LOEW'S

A very attractive stage and screen programme will be presented at Loew's all next week commencing tomorrow, Sunday. The feature screen farce will be Winnie Lightner in "Play Girl" supported by Loretta Young and Norman Foster. The vaudeville bill will be headlined by Sophie Tucker in person.

"Play Girl" is a love story of great dramatic power. Its emotional heights and depths are revealed against a background of rushing crowds in a big department store, which served as setting for many sequences. The uproarious comedy which lightens its sequences issues from store-clerks, big and little bosses, floorwalkers, irate lady customers, detectives and all the hodge-podge of a huge sales emporium.

COMMERCE DEFEATS ARTS 6-5

Triple Play Helps Businessmen To Win Nip-And-Tuck Battle

History Made In Fourth Inning Of Game Yesterday — Winners Now Deadlocked With Medicine For First Placé — Talpis Given Good Support By Team Mates To Gain Triumph Over Speedy Carmichael.

COMMERCE moved up into a tie for first place with Medicine again in the interfaculty baseball league yesterday afternoon by fighting tooth and nail with the highly touted Arts nine for a 6-5 victory. Two runs in the second, and four more in the fifth sealed the fate of the Classicists, who were held well in check by pitcher Talpis.

The game once more turned on the pitchers, the businessmen gave their moundsmen better support than Carmichael had, and as a result the losers were able to get more than one run across in one inning only. More Arts men were left on bases than Commerce men, and, as a matter of fact, bad base running cost the Commercial a win by a larger margin.

The feature of the afternoon was a triple play which the business men pulled off in the fourth inning with two Arts men on bases. The ball was hit hard out to center field where Corby made a fine catch, and relayed it fast to third to catch the runner coming back from second. None of the old-timers who were watching the fracas could remember a triple play ever being worked in the indoor league.

Double Plays Help Too.

Talpis was also saved by a couple of double plays that the Commercial pulled off at crucial points in the battle. When the Arts men were having their last turn at bat in the seventh inning they needed two runs to tie it up and succeeded in getting one of them across, and the other down as far as second. Edwards hit hard to Talpis in the box, who relayed it back to Ebbitt at second to catch Denton off the bag, and the game was over, the businessmen did not need to bat in the last half of the seventh.

Six of the winning team accounted for the runs, Corby and Bell completing the circuit in the second after they had touched Carmichael for singles, while Ebbitt, Talpis, Dadson, and Church figured in the scoring list in the big fifth stanza.

O feathered cork! I sing thy lay, With needless quip and rancid pun, I sing thy flighty, high-flown way, In other words—hall Badminton!

Again we reiterate that this game, originally English, has found so much favour with Canadians that it deserves as high a ranking as tennis has on our athletic curriculum. For a change, we in this country have been a jump ahead of our neighbours to the south by having more and better players engaged in this quite new game. Then why not go the full hog and establish badminton as a major sport before they do, as is bound to happen in a few years' time? Just this once, McGill, forget that you're in the Province of Quebec, the land of fifty-years-behind.

My oft-repeated words are just. If prompt despatch your vote gains; Games must be played by—the "must"

Is carried out by willing "mains."

And these same "mains" look mighty attractive when viewed together with their owners, as well-behaved "mains" should always be viewed. Many chorines do their little "song and dance" on a badminton floor, and can be noticed any practice day in the R.V.C. hall. (Tickets on your right, gentlemen.)

hands of the English when it became an important French naval base. It was their intermediate station between France and the important fortresses of Quebec and Montreal. It was settled by refugee Acadians and French settlers from Normandy.

In 1763 the island fell into British hands and a great part of the French population were forced to leave. A certain number, however, petitioned to be allowed to remain and their descendants form a large part of the island population today.

Forms Important Link.
Prince Edward Island has formed an important link in Canada's history, first through the immigration of a large number of its inhabitants to the New England states, thus forming a link between Canada and the States and secondly through the conception of Confederation in Charlottetown.

The gathering in Charlottetown was originally brought together with a view to the establishment of a Pan-Maritime-Provinces but the other provinces were invited to join in and out of this meeting grew confederation. Curiously enough, P. E. I. held aloof for a while hoping to resume her trade relations with the United States but she finally joined the Union.

Has Flourishing Industries.
The main support of the island at the present time is Agriculture and a notable fact in connection with this is that over 95% of the farmers are also owners while another 3% are at least part-owners. The population is poor, as far as money is concerned, but they live a very full and contented life.

To the summer visitor, Prince Edward Island offers many attractions. Her beaches bordering on the Atlantic provide warm, safe bathing. Her climate is good with a notable absence of fog.

Creditable Education System.
Prince Edward Island is a very advanced community as far as education, town-planning, sanitation etc. are concerned. Her educational system, in particular, is of exceptionally high standard and more than rivals that of any other province of Canada. Due to the small scope offered for the man of genius many of her sons have left to make a niche for themselves in the great outside world. She has given Canada many great men.

Describes Recent Work In Peracids

C. E. Powell Tells of Research Done At McGill

Recent work in connection with organic peracids was described to the Chemical Society yesterday afternoon by C. E. Powell, a graduate student. The lecture was illustrated by numerous slides of graphs.

The speaker divided his talk into three parts. First he discussed the historical aspect of the case leading up to the year 1922 when McGill first took an active interest in the question. Then he described the work done recently at McGill and finally some of the results obtained here.

The main work during recent years has been connected with the testing of the conductivities of the peracids. As it is impossible to obtain them in the pure state an absolute result cannot be obtained. The speaker showed a number of graphs obtained by plotting the resistance of a test cell against the percentage of the peracid in the cell. The results showed remarkable uniformity.

Much work remains to be done upon the subject before any definite results can be pronounced.

Rubie Entertained

Mr. H. E. Rubie, Secretary of the Anglo-Canadian Education Committee was entertained at tea yesterday afternoon in the East Wing. He is over here to visit the Canadian Universities and see how the English students studying here are getting on.

When interviewed he stated that he would rather not say anything as yet as he has not been in Canada long enough to form any impressions. He will remain here till Tuesday.

Improved Revue Went Over With Bang Last Night

honors go also to Jack Waud as the Emperor.

Speaking of Jack Waud, if you want to see a burlesque of Burlesque shimmy-dancers that will roll you out of your seats with laughter watch him in Salome. All parts of his body are in motion every minute he is dancing, and if he went in for the modern dance, we think he could out-dance Mary Wigman. Wonder if the executive of the Revue know that the Yiddish lettering on the scenery when translated means "Kosher Meal."

Costumes Applauded.
Last night was the first time that we have ever seen the costumes and scenery applauded in any show. When the curtain went up on the last scene "Studying" showing red Mariets against a white background, and the chorus dressed as Mariets, spontaneous applause burst from the audience. It is a shame that Mary Mickles doesn't get more of a part in the show because together with Bob Freeman she put Studying over with a bang.

All the tripe has been cut out of Making Music that was in the earlier performances; and Bunty Taylor, Eloise Fairie, and Bert Denton here do some effective tap-dancing. The Cabaret number with Claire Freeman who has a very sweet voice, was effective. She doesn't try to act, but has a soothing stage presence that comes as a welcome interlude to the comedy. But a word to the make-up crew—try a little more colour on Claire Freeman.

The short chorus was good in the cabaret number and the trio in Foolish You are much better than in their first song Rejected (PPPPPP PPPP for that one).

Credits also to: Bruce Ross and Jim Harvey for finally turning this year's Revue into an excellent show; Max Ford and Dick Sanction for Gin Rickshaw and to Ford for Auctioneer; costume department and scenery for the good job they did; the Freemans, Claire and Bob for their contributions; the trap-drummer for his ingenious noises.

The tall chorus, most of whom have been in the Revue for several years, should have learned to dance by this time.

lum. It is the story of an ambitious clerk who intends to make fortune and fame by her own efforts, unaided by anyone. How she uses her feminine prerogative of changing her mind when the right youth comes along, their hopes and intimacies constitute the story. Winnie Lightner, Loreta Young, Guy Kibbee, Norman Foster and many other screen favourites are excellent in their portrayals. The supporting cast includes James Ellison, Dorothy Burgess, Polly Walters, Mae Madison and Flora Finch.

the Bar in 1885, Chief Justice Green-shields was asked to assist at the trial of L. Riel in Regina. The defence decided to raise the plea of insanity, but the rebel was enraged and said "If there's anyone insane, it's my counsel!" The case was finally given to the Jurors, who sentenced Riel to death.

Circumstantial evidence is the most conclusive. The Chief Justice cited a case in which the Crown could not prove that a certain hat belonged to an attacker. The speaker for the accused, convinced the Jury that the prisoner was not guilty. The man was dismissed and since he did not go when asked his reason, replied, "I'm waiting for my hat".

Judge Green-shields told of a certain case in which he freed two men who were actually guilty. Another case in which the young burglar MacManus was involved was also related. The speaker was thanked by Professor Waugh, the meeting adjourned and refreshments were served.

Government Ends University Survey

comes Laval University with an enrollment of 11,124, only 2761 being of university grade. The University of Toronto had an enrollment of 7,178 and 6,704 of university grade; only 474 of preparatory grade. McGill had 7392 students, 2913 being of university grade.

As far as the attendance from foreign countries are concerned there were among the Canadian universities and colleges last year: 1,347 from the United States, 221 from the British Isles, 47 from the British West Indies, 164 from Newfoundland and 212 from other countries.

It has been shown by the survey which has just been concluded by the Canadian Government that the Universities in Canada which have the greatest enrollment seem to have the greatest number of those not of full University grade; while those which have the least number in enrollment have the greatest number of University grade. Also at the present time the number of men at the Universities far exceeds the women. The Provincial Governments and endowment funds also bear over four times the initial cost of a student's education.

French-Canadian Arts Discussed

Slides of many of these buildings were shown.

French art, which found its inspiration mainly in the carving of wood for altars and in the designing of furniture, was almost wholly a native product, the lecturer stated. Some of these altars, especially those by Raoul de Levesseur and his two sons, were highly artistic and showed an exceptional ability, unhampered by the art of France. Some of them showed a distinct pagan influence that can hardly be explained, and recalled the plaques of the ancient Greeks in technique and execution.
